Have you wondered what has happened at the factory site following the Bhopal gas disaster in 1984? Certainly the BBC (Radio 5 programme) reported on the ongoing pollution at the site in 2004. But there are few up-to-date studies of the latest situation in 2014 which this new publication provides.

The chapter by Professor Dr Rosamund Thomas in this new publication gives a careful analysis of recent court cases in the USA and India, as well as the Indian solutions of 2011 and 2012 put forward to clear the derelict factory site in Bhopal and dispose of the contaminated solid and liquid wastes – one solution calls on international experts to respond.

The two other authors in this publication, Spanish professors, Francesc Torralba and Miquel Seguró, each provide theoretical views about nature, eco-ethics, responsibility for our physical environment and that of our future generations. The authors also present case-studies of `good` corporate citizens in respect of their environmental credentials and activities.

This publication "Environmental Ethics Re-visited" (priced at £25, ISBN 978-1-871891-12-6), contains 58 pages and is available to purchase from 28th February 2014 from Ethics International Press Ltd on info@ethicspress.com.

Media can request an early review/complimentary copy from Mr Robert Willis at Ethics International Press Ltd (on info@ethicspress.com) or from Professor Rosamund Thomas on info@ethicscentre.org
